Woman choked, burned, held against her will

Police find suspect hiding in closet while serving warrant

From staff reports

A Lawrenceburg man remained behind bars Monday after being charged with choking a woman, burning her with a cigarette and holding her against her will, according to court documents.

Renaud

Trevor Renaud, 20, of 4033 Briar Creek Road, is being held on a $5,000 cash bond after being arrested June 17 by the Lawrenceburg Police Department. He pleaded not guilty when arraigned in Anderson District Court, where Judge Donna Dutton set his bail at $5,000 cash.

According to a report filed by trooper Gabe Welch of the Kentucky State Police, Renaud held the woman against her will by closing all the doors and windows at the residence and confining her to a bedroom, resulting in a charge of first-degree unlawful imprisonment, a felony.

Renaud also struck the woman, choked her and burned her with a cigarette, according to the report, resulting in a charge of fourth-degree assault.

He also threatened to kill her while choking her, according to the report, which resulted in a charge of third-degree terroristic threatening.

On the day of his arrest, Lawrenceburg police officer Clay Crouch said he spotted Renaud through a window at the residence. Crouch said Renaud attempted to hide inside the residence but was later found in a closet.

County punts on $400K loan

Judge-executive says court will 'try to get by' without it

By Ben Carlson News staff

Since Judge-Executive Orbreys Gritton took office in January, has been telling the Anderson County Fiscal Court that it needs to borrow $400,000 to close a budget deficit.

Last Tuesday, just before magistrates were scheduled to vote to borrow that amount money, Gritton recommended not doing it.

Gritton said afterward he did so because the lender, the Kentucky Association of Counties (KACo), changed the terms of the loan and that he was very happy about it. "Am I disappointed with KACo? Very much so," Gritton said last Friday afternoon from a conference he attended in Louisville.

Goodbye, Kenny

People flock to visitation, share memories
as one of Lawrenceburg's finest is laid to rest

By Ben Carlson and Ricki Barker News staff

Jenny Trent was trapped inside of her vehicle when an angel arrived to care for her.

That angel was Kenny Goodlett, 60, a beloved police officer, friend and family man who succumbed to cancer early last Friday morning.

Trent's story is one of hundreds, perhaps thousands of memories being shared as seemingly all of Anderson County mourns the loss of a public servant whose career included time with the ambulance service, sheriff's office and for the past six years, the Lawrenceburg Police Department.

Trent, who organized a candlelight service in Goodlett's memory last Friday night, said on a bitter cold day 12 years ago, her vehicle veered off icy US 62, crashed and left her trapped inside, unable to move.

"It was 15 degrees outside and there was snow and broken glass everywhere," she said.

Funeral service is today

Visitation for Kenny Goodlett is scheduled for 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. today (Wednesday) at Sand Spring Baptist Church on Harrodsburg Road.

Visitation will be followed by a funeral service at the church and interment in Lawrenceburg Cemetery.

Officer Kenny Goodlett of the Lawrenceburg Police Department flashes the smile that so many people came to know and love through his years of public service. Goodlett passed away last Friday morning after battling cancer.

Trent said the car was so damaged that she could only see out of a small opening and was praying for help when she said an angel arrived.

Trent's angel was Kenny

Goodlett. "He was definitely my angel that day," she said. "I'll never forget his kindness."

Cox is fairest of them all

High school grad wins crown after several attempts

By Ricki Barker News staff

The Lawrenceburg Fair and Horse Show has crowned its new queen.

Seven local beauties competed Monday evening for the title of Miss Lawrenceburg Fair and Horse Show 2015, but Jasmine Cox was deemed by the judges to be the fairest of them all.

The Anderson High School graduate said she is no stranger to the pageant, which she has competed in for years.

"It's the first time I've won," she explained while hugging her many supporters after the pageant.

Cox said she had hoped to win this year but was not expecting to hear her name announced as the winner.

"My heart skipped a beat," she said. "I was really surprised. I've been working towards this for years. It is an honor and a big reward."

The contestants are judged 50 percent on stage presence and poise. The other 50 percent is based on a pre-pageant interview.

Jasmine's father, Jeremy, said he couldn't be prouder of his daughter and was very excited to see her win.

LOAN

to KACo to the time we were got to the second reading [of the ordinance to borrow the money] the rate had changed and [KACo] put in a prepayment penalty.”

Gritton said he found out about the changes while on vacation earlier this month. He said he when he saw a KACo official last Friday while in Louisville, he asked the official why the terms of the loan had been changed.

“I didn’t get a lot of explanation from him,” Gritton said. “I don’t understand this at all.”

Gritton said the fiscal court, which had already passed a budget earlier this month that included $400,000 in loan proceeds, will now try to get by without it.

“We’re going to hold off and see how long we can make it,” Gritton said. “If we do have a borrowing need, we will figure out how much it’s going to be.

“I’m hoping we can get by without it, but it’s going to be lean.”

Earlier this month, Gritton said that without the $400,000, the fiscal court would not be able to meet its obligations heading into the new budget year, which begins July 1.

“The surplus of money and any reserves have been exhausted,” Gritton said in early June when asked why he and county treasurer Dudley Shyrock insist the county has a deficit when their proposed budget included roughly $250,000 in surplus, which did not include the $400,000 loan.

“We are in a position of, if we don’t get this loan, the county is looking at the very real possibility of being in bad trouble,” Gritton said at the time.

Asked if it meant the county could go into default by the end of the month, Gritton said, “Yes, and you can extrapolate that across the board. The majority of our income stream has been exhausted but the expense stream will carry on.”

Asked Friday if he stands by his contention that the $400,000 loan was needed, Gritton said, “I do. There is a need. I don’t k now how great it is, but I do think there is a need.”

Grant Satterly, KACo’s director of financial services, said Monday that the fiscal court was notified back in February that the rate KACo initially discussed for the loan had changed.

Satterly said KACo on Feb. 2 set the interest rate at 4.45 percent. Soon after, the interest rates nationally went up and that KACo notified Dudley Shyrock, the fiscal court’s treasurer, that the rate was going to be 4.85 percent.

“On Feb. 23, we still didn’t have an application for the loan, but we contacted the treasurer and said the rates had gone up,” Satterly said. “His answer was they still wanted to apply, but didn’t want to take the loan until the end of the fiscal year [June 30].

“Since we sell [the loans] to banks, the rate is only good for so long.”

Last week, Gritton questioned why KACo was shopping the loan around to banks.

“I don’t know why they took it outside of KACo,” he said.

On Monday, Satterly said KACo doesn’t loan its own money.

“All I can tell is you we told them from the beginning that we don’t lend them our money,” Satterly said. “We have a pool of banks and they are subject to whatever interest rates are at the time.”

Satterly said that when KACo and the fiscal court first discussed the loan, the county was told that KACo provides most of its loans without a prepayment penalty.

He said once KACo realized that the loan was being used to reimburse the fiscal court for money already spent more than six months ago, it had to include a prepayment penalty because it was taxable.

“It wouldn’t have been tax exempt,” he said. “The bank that would buy the paper ... the interest it received would be taxable to them.”

Satterly added that the prepayment issue “never came up, other than during our initial conversation, which was based on we thought it could be tax exempt.”

A budget deficit that never was

The fiscal court's decision last Tuesday not to borrow $400,000 to balance its budget laid to rest any doubt that there ever was a budget deficit.

Did the previous fiscal court burn off a large amount of cash putting together a recycling program that was ultimately doomed to fail? Sure it did; no one is questioning that.

What I am questioning is why there was ever discussion of a deficit in the first place.

I've been asking questions of the judge-executive and his treasurer for nearly two months, trying to give each the benefit of the doubt about a deficit that, frankly, I struggled to believe existed in the first place.

At first I was told the loan was to balance the budget because the previous fiscal court had blown the county's reserves building up a recycling program.

That came from the treasurer, and I duly reported what he had to say.

Then came the county's proposed budget, which made little sense because, there in black ink, it said that the fiscal court had a surplus of around $250,000, even without the loan.

Ben Carlson
Publisher

... not one magistrate on the current fiscal court ever publically questioned the so-called deficit. Not one. Instead, they voted unanimously and without comment on a budget that called for putting you, the taxpayer, $400,000 deeper in debt with a loan we now know wasn't even necessary. Some 'splaning to do, indeed.

when, out of the blue, the treasurer dropped a bombshell on the county's budget committee and declared that $400,000 was needed to balance the next budget.

From what I understand, that meeting became heated very quickly and ended with the committee chairman scribbling that missive into the meeting minutes, signing his name and storming out.

Not that I blame him. I sat through years of fiscal court meetings and, every time a major purchase or project was up for a vote, that magistrate looked over to the treasurer, asked point blank if the county could afford it and, being told yes, would cast his vote.

He wasn't alone in asking. The judge-executive at the time did the same thing, as did other magistrates.

Like Ricky told Lucy, someone has some 'splaning to do and I want to know why this charade, because that's what it was, was played on the people of Anderson County.

Why were taxpayers told of this deficit when even a cursory glance at the budget was evidence that no deficit existed?

Why would the treasurer, who supported and served as campaign treasurer for the previous judge-executive, drop such a large bomb on taxpayers just a month after his former boss was voted out of office?

Why didn't the treasurer, during the months leading up to his revelation about the deficit last December, not once even hint of trouble until that time? And why, when his former boss was campaigning for re-election by saying the fiscal court had only $100,000 less in reserves than when he first took office, did the treasurer back him up?

All of that is troubling enough yet is compounded by the fact that not one magistrate on the current fiscal court ever publically questioned the so-called deficit.

Not one.

Instead, they voted unanimously and without comment on a budget that called for putting you, the taxpayer, $400,000 deeper in debt with a loan we now know wasn't even necessary.

Some 'splaning to do, indeed.

City's shield laid to rest

One of the most common symbols of law enforcement is the police badge, or shield.

It is quite possibly the most important piece of an officer's uniform, the object not only identifies the wearer as a member of law enforcement it also serves as a reminder of their oaths to protect and serve their community.

An officer's badge is commonly worn on the left side of the chest over the heart. It is said the location hearkens back to ancient times when medieval knights bore their shields on their left arms to protect their hearts in battle while keeping their dominant hand free to fight with a weapon.

The shape of the badge is also a nod to a medieval knight's trusted form of protection, a shield.

As an officer in the Lawrenceburg Police Department, Kenny Goodlett, much like his ancient predecessors, swore to commit his life to protect and serve this community. Guarding us against the danger unseen.

Ricki Barker
Staff writer

His very name embodied his dedication to Lawrenceburg and its citizens. You can ask any officer that served alongside him, Goodlett was indeed one of the "good" guys.

His ability to be both stern and kind while on the job, led many people Goodlett had arrested in the past insist on helping the officer and his family during their time of need. Evidence that Goodlett was not just a good cop, he was a great man.

The impact of his service is made visible by the outpouring of sympathy from the community for Goodlett and his family.

While Goodlett battled cancer the community gathered around the veteran officer and his family, shielding them and providing comfort much like Goodlett had done for nearly three decades on the job.

He did what all good law enforcement does, be the shield for the community. The thin blue line that protects us from harm.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Good stewards of your tax dollars

To the editor:

In a world where it seems every day we see wasteful government spending, I am happy to report at least one of your tax districts here in Anderson County is doing its best to be good stewards of your tax dollars.

In full disclosure, I am on the Fire Board of the Anderson County Fire Protection District, although I am writing this letter as a fellow taxpayer.

Thursday night the board approved purchasing a new used fire truck to be put in service as a reserve engine — basically a spare fire truck. This is replacing an outdated pumper needing major repairs. There are times when a fire truck has to be taken out of service for repair work, etc. Having this reserve engine means your neighborhood firehouse will always have a fire truck in it to ensure your fire protection.

This is the second used fire truck we have purchased, the first being a rescue truck several years ago.

This truck has worked out extremely well, and was purchased at a price a fraction of the cost of a new truck. Our new reserve engine was also purchased far below what even a used truck should cost.

This was a result of Chief Pat Krogman's expertise and his extensive contacts in the fire department area. A comparable used truck like the one purchased could have cost up to $40,000. Our truck once again was a fraction of this amount.

Just for comparison sake, a new fire pumper costs upwards of $400,000. The board and members of the Anderson County Fire District take very seriously our responsibility to the taxpayers of Anderson County to be good stewards of your tax dollars. We will continue to do the best job we can for the citizens of Anderson County, while also being committed to fiscal responsibility.

Garlic, onions make potent bug repellent

It's officially summer. I don't even need a calendar because I can spot that blue chicory and those orange lilies along the sides of the road, my personal harbingers. Evening skies glow with lightening bugs flashing gold like dust motes in the sunshine. Just driving to work, through the winding green canopy, is a treasure for the eyes. Man, I love this season.

We had our first summer power outage here on the farm last week. It was only off for an hour and thankfully the storm cooled the temperatures down to open window weather. I drove the road to chat with neighbors. Everyone was outside.

Storms and power outages happen frequently here in Kentucky. It's silly not to be prepared for it. Something that may have slipped your mind is to have a corded phone in the house if you have a landline. Out here in the country, I have to have a mini cell tower in the house in order to use my cell phone. When the power goes, the internet and cell phone go as well.

I have a landline for that very reason, but the base unit for my cordless phone depends on power. My old wall phone is a throwback to my Pepsi loving days, but it works when the power is out. Consequently, I was the one to call about the power outage here on the ridge.

Cheryl Steenerson
Columnist

During the summer, it's also a good idea to keep a bag of ice in the freezer. You can always pop it into the refrigerator to keep things chilled. If you think it will be out for longer than an hour, stock a cooler with drinks and snack foods, so the family doesn't keep opening the refrigerator, letting the cold out.

If you haven't checked your battery stocks, this is the time. Check your flashlights, lanterns and oil lamps to be sure they all will work. You need something to read or play games by. A transistor radio is handy for news and weather updates.

In central Anderson County you can find 1620 on the AM dial and get continuous NOAA weather reports. A car charger for your cell phone is pretty handy as well.

Now, let's get in the garden. Anyone else notice the ravenous insects out there? When mowing in the early evening, I've been getting bit by a tiny, hard shelled black bug that flies. I have no idea what it is, except annoying. I also got eaten up by chiggers, when I was weeding and laying down newspapers and mulch last weekend. I forgot my chamomile tea spray.

Four bags, steeped in 2 cups of hot water, and then transferred into a spray bottle makes a great bug repellent. I store it in the fridge. You just have to remember to spray your body before you get dressed. Those chiggers are incredible explorers.

To keep bugs off the plants I use my old reliable smelly onion and garlic spray. Cut up one large onion, 4 cloves of fresh garlic (or 2 teaspoons of the chopped jar variety) in a gallon of water. Let it sit in the sun for a couple of hours and then strain out the pieces and transfer to a spray bottle. Add a few drops of oil or liquid soap to help it stick to the leaves and then spray away.

Instead of Sevin Dust, try using plain old baby powder on the leaves. If you are having problems with bigger critters, of the four-legged variety, you can stock up on cayenne pepper to sprinkle on the soil around the plant.

Now, get out there. The sun is shining and the birds are singing. Everything is growing at warp speed. Computers and TVs are no match for the live showing of summer. Happy growing.

Cheryl Steenerson is a gardening columnist for The Anderson News.

Odorous house ants do more than stink

Tommy Yankey
Extension columnist

Description and nesting sites

OHA are mistaken for pavement ants, which can readily be controlled with most baits. The most accurate diagnostic difference, visible under magnification, is the absence of a noticeable node or "bump" along the constricted area between thorax and abdomen of the odorous house ant. Pavement ants have two obvious nodes, and fine grooves or striations along the head and thorax. Pavement ants also are more likely to displace bits of soil from their typical nesting location under sidewalks, driveways, and other paved areas.

New care standards for diabetes

Diabetes affects over 29 million Americans. It is a condition in which the body does not properly process food for use as energy.

Most of the food we eat is turned into glucose, which our bodies use for energy.

The pancreas makes a hormone called insulin to help glucose get into the cells of the body. When you have diabetes, the body either doesn't make enough insulin or the cells can't effectively use the insulin that is made. When there is insufficient insulin, blood glucose levels become high.

When glucose builds up in the blood instead of going to the cells it can lead to diabetes complications.

Proper management of diabetes is necessary to prevent complications. The Standards of Medical Care in Diabetes provides evidence-based clinical practice recommendations for diabetes care. It was updated in January of 2015.

A summary of the minor changes that clarify recommendations or reflect new evidence is stated below:

The American Diabetes Association now recommends a premeal blood glucose target of 80-130 mg/dL, rather than 70-130 mg/dL, to better reflect new data comparing actual average glucose levels with A1C targets.

A new blood sugar standard for children and adolescents — a hemoglobin A1C of <7.5 or less.

Physical activity: All individuals, including those with diabetes should limit the time they spend in sedentary activities by breaking up extended amounts of time spent sitting.

Individuals with diabetes are more likely to have high blood pressure. The recommended goal for diastolic blood pressure was changed from 80 mmHg to 90 mmHg for most people with diabetes and hypertension. Lower diastolic targets may still be appropriate for certain individuals.

Risk status rather than a person's LDL cholesterol level will drive the decision to initiate statin (cholesterol lowering medication) treatment or lipid monitoring.

To better target individuals who are at higher risk for foot problems, new recommendations suggest that individuals with insensate (devoid of sensation or feelings) feet, foot deformities or a history of foot ulcers have their feet examined at every visit.

People 65 or older should get the pneumonia vaccine in two separate shots — PCV13 (Prevnar), followed 12 months later by PPSV23 (Pneumovax).

A statement that e-cigarettes are not an alternative to smoking or a way to help smokers quit has been included in the new standards.

Education is an important part of managing diabetes successfully. Exercise and healthy eating of modest sized portions are essential to manage diabetes along with medication for many patients.

Plants, flowers hidden dangers to pets

Buds burst forth, plants bloom in rainbows of color, the air is cool and refreshing.

But don't be fooled. There are hidden dangers in our yards and gardens, not only for our sensitivities, but for Kitty and Fido.

Pet owners know that dogs and cats can often find the strangest things to chew on. Whether it be plastic, wool or plants in the house or the garden, it can be at odds with your pet's health. Here's a list of some of the most common plants to be concerned with.

Lots of homes have a plant or two of aloe vera. It's great for us as a quick treatment for bug bites and burns. But for our pets it can cause vomiting, diarrhea and tremors. The same goes for the popular amaryllis. It can cause the same symptoms along with hypersalivation and anorexia. Azaleas and rhododendrons are not only toxic to cats and dogs, but horses, goats and sheep as well. Just a few leaves cause serious problems from weakness to leg paralysis and weak heart rate.

The common floral filler, baby's breath, can cause vomiting and diarrhea. Watch out for castor beans when out in the yard or on dog walks. This is a common but intrusive plant to some but the bean is dangerous to animals and humans. There are many varieties of ivy that adorn landscapes. But beware; ivy foliage is more dangerous than the berries. A fence of morning glory flowers is a beauty to behold. A cat high on morning glory flowers is no laughing matter. The animal can show agitation, tremors and hallucinations.

How about our garden staple, the tomato plant? They may not be lethal to your pet, but they can make them mighty uncomfortable. The animal can experience lack of appetite, confusion, weakness and slow heart rate.

Pathos is a most popular plant for many households and it's not the most toxic plant on the list but it can still do damage to both cats and dogs. Chewing on the leaves can cause intense burning of the mouth and lips, vomiting and difficulty swallowing.

Tulips and narcissus have the highest concentration of toxins. So, if your dog digs, be cautious. This is just a drop in the bucket of plants to be aware of. If you'd like to learn more about plants to watch out for, go to www.humanesociety.org.

YANKEY

OHA emit a rotten coconut or pine scent when crushed.

OHA will nest in virtually every imaginable location. Outdoor sites include under pavements, stones, mulch, woodpiles, flowerpots, and house siding. They may forage indoors for food and moisture. Nests also occur indoors within wall cavities, appliances, etc., especially near sources of moisture. The nests tend to be mobile; colonies relocate fast and often in response to changes in weather and disturbance.

OHA colonies tend to have numerous, egg-laying queens and the primary colonies may split into smaller ones for no apparent reason. Ants foraging indoors feed on all manner of foods, ranging from the trashcan to the cereal bowl.

Management
OHA is difficult to control, especially by homeowners.

The better baits to try are often syrupy ones, such as Combat® Ant Killing Gel or Terro® Ant Killer II.

As with all ants, activity indoors can sometimes be reduced by removing ready access to food and moisture (water leaks, spillage, trash cans, pet food dishes, etc.).

Temporary relief can sometimes be gained by wiping away the invisible odor trails with a kitchen cleanser or mild detergent. Do not disturb foraging trails, however, if you are using bait.

Caulking obvious ant entry points also may be helpful, along with trimming back shrubs and limbs touching buildings. In nature, this ant feeds extensively on plant nectar and honeydew excreted by plant-sucking insects such as aphids.

When OHA are the problem, homeowners may be better off calling a professional, although they, too, are challenged by this ant. Some products used by professionals can be effective but are not available to the general public.

Today the community will lay Goodlett to rest with honors well-deserved and will celebrate a life of duty and service. He leaves behind an example of what one man can do for their community.

We have lost one of our greatest protectors; our knight in shining armor.

The shield was more than a symbol Kenny Goodlett wore on the job, it is what he was.

Members of Kenny Goodlett's family and friends participate in last Friday's candlelight ceremony at the county park. His brother-in-law, Glen Drury, thanked the community profusely for its support, thoughts and prayers.

KENNY

According to Trent, Goodlett lay next to her vehicle on the cold, wet ground and reached through the small opening to clutch her hand while they waited for EMS and firefighters to come cut Trent out of the mangled vehicle.

"It was so cold," Trent recalled. "He kept me calm and never left my side. He made sure I was OK and was talking to me the whole time through that opening."

When EMS arrived and Trent was finally freed from her vehicle, she remembered her purse had cash inside and did not wish to leave it behind in the wreckage.

"As they were loading me into the ambulance I grabbed him by the coat and begged him to find my purse."

Goodlett went back into the cold and searched through the twisted metal and glass in hopes of finding Trent's purse.

"He found it stuck in the headliner of the car," explains Trent. "I was so grateful he did that for me."

But Goodlett wasn't finished yet.

After he made sure Trent was safely on her way to the hospital, he got back into his vehicle and made his way down the dangerous road to inform Trent's family of the accident.

"He didn't call or just leave," said Trent. "He made sure that he was the one to tell them in person."

Over the years, Trent said she often thought about Goodlett and his compassion.

"I never forgot," she said. "I thanked him many years ago, but I wish I could have thanked him recently for what he did. Reminded him of what that meant. He knows what he did though. He was a good man. My prayers are with his family."

Trent isn't alone. Thousands of people have paid their final respects for Goodlett during calling hours that started Monday afternoon at Sand Spring Baptist Church, and thousands more are expected to say goodbye when he is laid to rest today

Shown are just a few of the approximately 80 police, fire and EMS vehicles that escorted Kenny Goodlett to Sand Spring Baptist Church on Monday afternoon.

(Wednesday) in Lawrenceburg Cemetery.

Nearly from the moment he was diagnosed with cancer, Goodlett's fellow officers and legion of friends took action to not only care for him, but his family.

A fundraiser put together by Dude Caldwell and Eddie Carey raised well in excess of $10,000 to help offset his medical expenses, and donations continue to pour into an account established in his wife Debbie's name on Commonwealth Credit Union.

One officer said even people who Goodlett arrested in the past were making donations.

"That's just how he is," the officer said. "Everyone loves Kenny."

Upon news of his death early last Friday, police officers and first responders from across the region joined forces to bring him home from Lexington, resulting in a procession of at least 60 fire, police and EMS vehicles escorting his body to Gash Memorial Chapel. During that drive, every intersection between Lexington and Gash Memorial was blocked by no fewer than two police cars.

On Monday, even more police and first responders were on hand to escort his body from Gash Memorial to the church, an estimated 80 vehicles with lights flashing and sirens blaring in a slow procession down Harrodsburg Road.

Once there, several dozen officers from a host of police agencies and first responders stood at attention and saluted as Goodlett's body was lifted from a hearse and carried by his fellow officers into the church, where he would lay in state for three days of visitation.

Outside the church, a Lawrenceburg police car was parked by the front door, its lights flashing continuously in honor of Goodlett.

As news of his death spread, tributes streamed across social media platforms as those who knew and loved him shared their thoughts and memories.

"Officer Goodlett was a kind, stern man," Deborah Renner said on this newspaper's Facebook page. "As a foster mother he came to a call to my home once when a foster child ran away. He was very compassionate, caring and listened as the child spoke."

"Then he said in a stern, loving way, 'You should be thankful for a place to live, thankful for a loving family because so many don't have that.'

"After a few minutes the child agreed to be good and not run away again. I'm very thankful and honored to have met him."

Terri Hawkins recalled how Goodlett helped her when he son passed away in 2011.

"Officer Kenny Goodlett was there for us," she wrote. "He was a very sweet man and he will be very missed by all."

Andrea Wilburn said she always enjoyed having him stop in when she worked a night shift at a local gas station.

"He would always ask about my boys," she wrote. "He was a sweetheart and he knew how to make you feel safe, not to mention every morning at 3 a.m. he always had a beautiful smile to share."

"Officer Goodlett was a good man that always had a smile on his face," wrote Renee Manley. "I am honored to have gotten the opportunity to meet him."

Readers share memories of Kenny

Since his death early last Friday morning, tributes to officer Kenny Goodlett of the Lawrenceburg Police Department have been pouring into this newspaper's Facebook page and other online platforms.

Here are some of those tributes.

I wish all the best of luck to officer Kenny Goodlett and his family. I am so sorry to hear the loss of a wonderful man and police officer. I've known him for years. He was a dedicated officer who served and protected Lawrenceburg.

—Nikka Clark

My heart hurts for the loss of my friend Kenny Goodlett. He and his wife Debbie have been friends for years. Kenny worked for me doing jail transports on weekends from 1999 - 2006 while he was also working at the sheriff's office. He always enjoyed it. Hardly ever asked for any time off. He always volunteered for anything that needed to be done. He truly loved his work. He was very good at tracking down people that were wanted on warrants. He would sit sometimes for hours waiting for them to show up. Probably his biggest bust was the indoor grow of 2003. I had never saw so much marijuana before. I was very fearful when the officers went into that house that night thinking it may have been booby-trapped. Everything went OK and Kenny was as proud as could be. So many stories to be told but none will compare with how my heart hurt last Saturday at the hospital when I went to see him. He held on to me with an incredibly strong grip like he was saying I'm still here! Walking out of that room knowing I would probably never see him again was one of life's most hurtful moments. I can't image how his wife Debbie, their children and family are feeling. All we can do is to try and support them in the days to come. You will never be forgotten Kenny! R.I.P.

—Anderson County Jailer Joani Clark

Thank you for your service. RIP and comfort his family and work family.

Will miss seeing you and the talks about growing up in the country. May God be with your family and many friends. Rest in Peace.

—Kimberly Holt Lynch

The fight is over now. Kenny won in the end because he is no longer suffering. He may now rest easy and keep a watchful eye on his family and his town he so honorably served for so very long. Prayers to family. Hang in there. You have a whole community supporting you all.

Feeding Pharoah

Lawrenceburg feed store fed Triple Crown winner

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Frank Tinsley was feeding an eventual Triple Crown winner and didn't even know it. He does now and is mighty proud of the fact that food created at Anderson County Farm Service fed the mighty American Pharoah for nearly a year. "Someone said we should hang a banner on the front of the building," Tinsley said last week. "I'm definitely proud but don't really like to toot my own horn."

American Pharoah, who took America by storm by becoming the first horse since 1973 to claim the Triple Crown, was stabled at Taylor Made farm in Nicholasville from January to October 2013. During that time, the horse ate food custom made for him by Tinsley and his staff, giving Lawrenceburg and Anderson County Farm Service a permanent link to Triple Crown history.

John Hall, the farm's assistant to the general manager who was yearling manager during American Pharoah's time at that farm, praised the feed the farm buys from Tinsley.

"We have a nutritionist, Dr. Steve Jackson, who sets up the formulas and gives them to Frank," Hall said. "The quality of the feed is fantastic. It's always fresh and the horses love it."

"It's a great product. They mix it to our specs and you couldn't ask for a better company to do business with. It's a fantastic family-run operation."

Tinsley said the formula used to feed American Pharoah was unique.

"It's a custom mix but not really a secret," he said without revealing the exact formula. "It's something they made up and that's what he ate."

Tinsley said he has worked at Anderson County Farm Service since 1971 and has owned it since 1985. He began selling Taylor Made all of its horse feed in 1986 and has ever since.

He said he was pulling for American Pharoah to win the Triple Crown, although he admits he didn't immediately know that the horse was raised for nearly a year on his food.

"I was aware when he was coming up for the Derby that that they had him at that farm," Tinsley said. "There have been other Derby runners that spent time on that farm that we've fed, too."

Tinsley said he has no doubt that having his horse feed help raise a Triple Crown winner is good for business, but wasn't too interested in hanging the banner someone mentioned.

That didn't come as a surprise to Hall.

"He's a humble kind of guy," Hall said. "He really is. We have

Fireworks planned for July 4

From staff reports

A fireworks display and other events are scheduled for Saturday, July 4.

Sponsored by city and county government, the display will be shown at the county park at dusk.

A rain date is scheduled for Saturday, July 11 at the same time and location.

At 5:30 p.m., the annual Veterans Parade sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary is scheduled to begin at Legion Park and end at the Lawrenceburg Green.

Lineup for the parade is scheduled for 4:30 at the Legion.

From 6 to 10 p.m., a veterans recognition ceremony is scheduled along with a live concert featuring Sunset Blonde.

The concert will include games, food and festivities, organizers said.

Bart Powell, the county's director of emergency management, said that the private use of fireworks is not allowed in the county park at any time, and has requested that people do not use them before, during or after the display.

"There will be a lot of people there and a lot of vehicles," he said. "We want everyone to come out and enjoy the display safely."

'God saved us'

Strong storm blows roof off daycare, sends Bible group scrambling for cover

By Ben Carlson
News staff

With his 8-month-old grandson in his arms, Lawrenceburg resident Tommy Wise was forced to hunker down beside his car as portions of a daycare center's roof blew past him last Thursday evening.

"I no sooner picked him up out of his car seat when the sheet metal started coming off the roof," Wise said. "I was scared to death. I had no idea what was going on."

"All I could do was duck down. It happened in a blink of an eye."

Wise was among a couple of dozen people who feared for their lives when a storm packing 70 to 75 mph winds ripped the roof off a daycare center called Abundant Life Christian Learning Tree House on US 127, toppled to truck trailers at nearby Florida Tile, uprooted trees and caused damage to several homes in the Alton area.

Wise and others were heading into Kentucky Transmissions, where owner Kerry Branham hosts a Bible study and meal each Thursday night, when the storm hit.

a group of about 17 people were preparing for the Bible study and a meal when the storm hit.

"People were going upstairs," Branham said. "I dove into a bathroom and told everyone to get downstairs, fast."

"I want everyone to know that Jesus Christ protected us.

God saved every one of us." Branham's building also sustained minor damage, as did a number of the vehicles in his parking lot.

Bonnie Rutherford operates the daycare center and said she had just left the building about 10 minutes before the storm hit.

She said the children had been gone for about an hour.

Debris from the daycare's roof blew across US 127 and landed on the property surrounding Brunswick Community and Technical College.

A section of the roof on a home between Florida Tile and the daycare center appeared to sustain significant roof damage and had a large tree uprooted in its yard.

At Florida Tile, two FedEx trailers laid on their sides from the winds, and there was considerable roof damage to one of the buildings.

Bart Powell, the county's director of emergency operations, said Monday that contacts at the National Weather Service have confirmed his earlier suspicions that the damages were caused by straight-line winds, estimated at 70-75 mph.

Powell said there were no reported injuries as a result of the storm.

Rutherford was forced to relocate her daycare business while repairs were being made to the building, which is owned by Sheryl Wells of Lawrenceburg.

According to information posted on the daycare center's

"I no sooner picked him up out of his car seat when the sheet metal started coming off the roof. I was scared to death. I had no idea what was going on. All I could do was duck down. It happened in a blink of an eye."

Scottie Wise holds her 8-month-old grandson about an hour after her husband, Tommy, was forced to seek shelter while holding the child when a storm blew in.

FedEx trailers are toppled at Florida Tile, which also sustained damages to a portion of roof on one of its buildings last week.

Poker run assists Healing Field

From staff reports

Despite the threat of rain, the eighth annual Poker Run at the American Legion Unit 34 raised $4,635 to benefit the Healing Field, organizers announced.

Tom Hunter and his wife, parents of a son honored in the Healing Field signaled the start of the run.

The first 15 to register received a Healing Field T-shirt, and all participants who purchased a poker hand received a rocker patch with Healing Field and date, along with a post card of the Healing Field with information about it on the back.

Trophies were given to the best two hands, along with a trophy for the worst hand.

A silent auction was held, along with a 50/50 jackpot. The winner of the jackpot donated the proceeds back to the Healing Field.

Participants also were served a meal of burgers, hot dogs, beans, chips, cookies and soft drinks.

"The American Legion Auxiliary wishes to thank all citizens and businesses for their generous donations," organizers said in a news release.

"There were so many who gave their time, talents and money. We wish to thank those who donated the many wonderful silent auction items, the businesses and individuals who sponsored ads on the T-shirts, the donations of food and the volunteers who cooked."

Lawrenceburg man injured when truck hits trees

By Ben Carlson
News staff

A pickup truck driven by a Lawrenceburg man went off Harrodsburg Road just north of Bypass Motors and ended up in a group of trees last Friday afternoon.

The man, identified as Ray Searcy of Palmer Road, sustained non-life threatening injuries and was transported to the University of Kentucky Medical Center.

A woman and her niece were driving by when they said they saw Searcy standing near the edge of the road.

“At first we thought he was just waving to us,” said Christina Swanson, a Tennessee resident who was with her niece, Anderson County High School junior Kristen Freed.

“Then we saw blood on his face and turned around,” she said. “When we got back he collapsed to the ground.”

Swanson said a member of the Anderson County Fire Department drove by, stopped to help and called 911 for assistance.

“We weren’t sure what was going on,” Swanson said. “He was just standing there waving and people just kept driving by. God told me to turn around and help him.”

Searcy’s pickup truck went through heavy brush and appeared to shear a large branch off a tree before coming to rest.

First responders at the scene noted that there were no skid marks on the road and it appeared Searcy had blacked out while driving.

BCTC's Lawrenceburg Campus provides quality education at an affordable price close to home

With parents struggling to finance their children's higher education needs amid the constant hikes in tuition at traditional four-year universities, Bluegrass Community and Technical College's (BCTC) Lawrenceburg Campus is the perfect avenue to a quality education at an affordable price for the first two years of a student's career at college.

BCTC Lawrenceburg provides several educational opportunities, tailored to meet individuals' needs. For instance, adults who are looking for a shorter path to a new career can find technical education a good choice, and excellent jobs are waiting for those with an Associate of Applied Science in one of our technical programs.

Opening in the Fall of 1995, BCTC Lawrenceburg started as Anderson Technology Center, later changing in the late 1990s to Central Kentucky Technical College (CKTC) - Anderson Campus. In 2005, it became Bluegrass Community and Technical College-Lawrenceburg with the merger of CKTC and Lexington Community College. Last fall, our enrollment was 570 students - 67% female and 33% male, and our average age at Lawrenceburg is 25.

Our largest and most popular program at Lawrenceburg is the Associate of Applied Science in Nursing.

The Registered Nurse (RN) Program is offered during evening and weekend hours for working adults and we admit 40 new students to the program each fall. Students who graduate with an Associate of Applied Science in Nursing degree will be able to pursue a Bachelor's of Science in Nursing at four-year colleges and universities.

One of the best things about BCTC Lawrenceburg is we work very closely with four-year public and private colleges and universities in the area to provide seamless transfers for our students. We have a great database that shows transfer course numbers for each college, so students don't need to worry that something doesn't transfer!

Our dual credit program with Anderson County High School is very strong and it provides our second largest group of students.

Six college classes a year are offered at the high school and seniors who meet college benchmarks may take classes on the BCTC Lawrenceburg Campus.

We are proud to say over 100 juniors and seniors have expressed interest in dual credit for the upcoming fall semester.

We realize that life is very busy sometimes and attending class at an actual physical location just isn't possible for everyone, especially those who work or have families to take care of. So we offer a variety of programs online through BCTC, such as Interdisciplinary Early Childhood, Business, Computer Information Technology, and Criminal Justice, to name a few. Students can also complete their general education classes here in Lawrenceburg and then travel to Lexington for such programs as surgical tech, dental hygiene and HVAC.

Business Partnerships:
BCTC Lawrenceburg partners with both the Anderson County and Frankfort Area Chambers of Commerce, and we also serve on the Work Ready Communities committees to ensure an educated workforce.

We participate in the Leadership Anderson County initiative and our Workforce Solutions unit has provided workforce training for companies such as Florida Tile, Wild Turkey, Four Roses, and General Cable.

Charleston victims and families demonstrate real Christianity

We saw evil personified last week.

Maybe you didn't see it in flesh and blood, unless you were in Charleston, South Carolina, but we saw the photos and videos. We couldn't miss Dylann Roof's mop haircut and glazed eyes in the daily papers and in the national news.

We should have been heartbroken. Nine people went to their church for Bible study and never came home. Their ages ranged from 26 to 87.

We saw again that evil has no boundaries. A young man with life ahead of him and an elderly grandmother who had lived her life trying to do good are gone. So are seven other good people, vibrant lives snuffed out because of the color of their skin.

If we can't be heartbroken by that, we have no heart.

We can be heartbroken for Roof's family who, according to news reports, called police when they saw the photos from a church security camera. A sister postponed her wedding. And for years to come, the family name will be tarnished.

Different circumstances but still heart-breaking.

Almost immediately after evil reared its ugly head, the answers started coming in: Ban the guns. Take down the Confederate flag. Beef up the security. Arm the churches.

They're well-meaning, all of them.

But they all fall short of meaningful change at the heart of the matter.

While making it difficult for lethal weapons to wind up on the hands of the emotionally disturbed is a noble goal, we have seen time and again that if someone wants to do harm, that person will find a way, making the call for fewer weapons naïve indeed.

It's just as sad to tell those who attend worship services they should be armed in what should be a sanctuary of peace. Do we really want to say, "Pack your Sword of the Spirit and a Glock 27?"

Such thought runs counter to the message of Jesus Christ, who preached loving the unlovable.

The call for taking down the Confederate battle flag from a government grounds is certainly understandable and is long past due, given how honoring a cause that included holding black people as slaves is so offensive to so many.

But while that would be a visible sign, it's still trying to heal an open, festering wound with a Band-Aid.

The problem is much deeper than a battle flag.

It's a problem that can't be solved with an absence of guns, nor can it be solved with an abundance of firepower.

Real healing has to come from the heart and until we understand that basic fact, the racial problems that still divide us 150 years after the Confederacy was defeated will live on. Hatred lives on, regardless of laws meant to ensure that men who are created equal are treated equally. We might nobly try, but in the end, we can't fully legislate decency and goodness in people.

That brings us to one of the most haunting stories to come out of Charleston.

According to multiple sources, Roof told investigators he almost backed out of his planned massacre because the people at Emanuel AME Church were "so nice to him."

The personification of evil had come face to face with real Christianity.

At Roof's bond hearing, relatives of the victims said things like, "You hurt a lot of people, but God forgives you, and I forgive you."

"May the Lord have mercy on your soul."

"We would like you to take this opportunity to repent. Repent. Confess. Give your life to the one who matters the most, Christ, so he can change your ways no matter what happens to you and you'll be OK. Do that and you'll be better off than you are right now."

In a world where baiters of all races fan the flames of hatred, we also saw people loving one who had taken loved ones away. We saw people loving the unlovable.

We saw people offering real healing instead of a Band-Aid.

It is a living, walking Christianity that can truly change the world.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR YOU TO ANSWER

The church where you attend:

1. Was it started by God or man?
2. Upon what does it stand?
3. When did it begin?
4. By what name is it called?
5. What must one do to be a member?
6. How is it structured?
7. What does it teach?
8. Is it known for its spiritual or worldly practices?
9. Who controls what happens?
10. How do you worship?
11. Why do YOU attend?
12. Does Jesus recognize it as HIS body?

It makes a difference what one believes and practices, and one cannot afford to be wrong in their worship. Jesus promised to build HIS church and HE has given us HIS book to make sure that we are a part of it (Matt. 16:18-19; Heb. 1:1-2). Truth fears no investigation!

Beat the heat with icy treats

Growing up in the south Texas heat, my sisters and brothers and I were always either in the lake, the pool or the sprinkler. If for some reason we ever took a break from the water, we were running around barefoot with the other neighborhood kids, laughing and playing and secretly hoping to hear the music of the ice cream truck so we could enjoy a cool treat. But when the ice cream man wasn't around we would improvise by making a treat of our own. We thought we had created something genius just by freezing Kool-Aid, apple juice or just water and I guarantee you we enjoyed every minute of it.

The other day when my kids went to the fridge to find out all the freezer pops were gone, I had a flashback from childhood and I quickly got busy in the kitchen showing them how easy it is to make a homemade Popsicle. Not only did they enjoy cooking, they were able to be creative and eat a healthier Popsicle than what we usually have from the store.

You should definitely try these recipes and after you've made them then try adding some of your other favorite ingredients and see what you come up with.

Berry Yogurt Pop
2- 5.3 oz containers of 100 calorie Greek yogurt (I used what I had in the fridge- one French vanilla and one blueberry)

3 tbsp honey
1 tsp vanilla
8 oz frozen blueberries
5 strawberries (from my garden, yay!)

Mix all ingredients in blender or food processor until smooth. Pour into ice pop molds, add sticks. Freeze until solid.

Orange Dream Pop
6 oz thawed orange juice concentrate
1 cup milk
1 cup water
1/2 cup sugar
1 1/2 tsp vanilla

Blend all ingredients together. Pour into ice molds, freeze until solid, enjoy!

Former Clemson and Tulane head football coach Tommy Bowden speaks at Hope Community Church Sunday morning. Bowden, who also had a stint as an assistant coach at the University of Kentucky, delivered a strong challenge to Christian living.

An old-school message to modern times

Bowden uses platform of coaching success, talks about his first love

Tommy Bowden is a football coach. At least that's how he's known to the masses.

And even though he's been away from the sidelines for more than six years, that success he had at Tulane and Clemson give Bowden an avenue to share his first love.

Bowden, who also spent a year as Bill Curry's first offensive coordinator at the University of Kentucky, was in town over the weekend, speaking at Hope Community Church Sunday morning.

He was using a platform given by his enormous gridiron success to talk about his deep Christian faith.

"I have a big platform because of what I did," he told those gathered to worship Sunday morning.

What Bowden did was forge a 90-49 record and take teams to nine bowl games in 11 full years of coaching. However Clemson and he parted ways midway through the 2008 season. Since then, Bowden has been working television - he's now analyzing the ACC for Fox Sports South - and talking about what is his real life.

It's a message that is as old-school as the single-wing delivered to a modern crowd.

"I believe in the inerrant and infallible Word of God," Bowden said during Sunday's worship hour.

It was a simple statement. But it forms the core of his message and one he learned from his famous father, Bobby Bowden, who was the second-winningest college football coach of all-time when he was let go at Florida State after the 2009 season.

"My father was my Sunday School teacher," Bowden said later as we talked between Hope's two main services. "I would see him at home reading the Bible. He was a great example. I had a great mentor."

Part of Bowden's message focused on life's ups and downs. They hit his family hardest on the football field.

Tommy Bowden, who never had a losing season as a head coach, shared a bit about his ouster at Clemson during the 2008 season. The Tigers were 3-3 when things came to an end. "They said I resigned to soften it, but my contract said if I resigned, I didn't get the buyout," Bowden remembered.

An ESPN report from the time said Bowden offered to resign after the team lost to Wake Forest but that he would be paid through the end of the season and receive a $3.5 million buyout.

Less than a year earlier, he had been given a contract extension.

"You put two-and-two together," Bowden smiled as we talked Sunday morning.

Bowden now lives in the Florida panhandle. In addition to his work with Fox, he also does some commentary for Raycom. He's also busy as a speaker at Christian conferences and

The Anderson County High School boys' basketball team was scheduled to complete summer basketball Tuesday. Since the Bearcats began playing other teams in off-season workouts, they have given glimpses that the accolades putting them among the contenders for the Eighth Region championship in 2016.

"The team has progressed good," Anderson assistant coach Bryan Hyatt said Friday. "With four returning starters and a player that played off the bench last year we obviously didn't have to start over. All of our guys have put in work in all areas."

The Bearcats hosted Bardstown last Thursday. Hyatt noted that score was not kept as a regular season game but the scoreboard was reset at each quarter. "We won by about 8-10 points if the score was combined," he said. "Cobe (Penny) had a big day, probably around 20 points."

Penny, a sophomore, returns to the Anderson lineup along with classmate Gunnar Gillis, junior John Paul Garmon and senior Dillon Harper.

Currens helps East to victory in all-star game

From staff reports

Anderson County's Kaci Currens scored 11 points as the East team beat the West, 71-69, in the Kentucky High School Coaches Association Junior All-Star Game held Saturday night at Bellarmine University in Louisville.

Currens' three-point shot gave the East a 49-48 lead late in the third quarter, the team's first lead since the opening quarter. The East later went on a 10-0 run to take command of the annual all-star game.

Hailey Ison, of Walton-Verona, led the East team, which was made up of players from the Seventh and Eighth regions. Currens was next, along with Louisville Eastern's Markeia Porter, with 11.

Caverna's Madison Faulkner led the West with 19 points while Elizabethtown's Erin Boley, a Notre Dame commitment, scored 14.

Hoops Hall of Fame induction ceremony tickets on sale

Conner, Kavanaugh coach among inductees

From staff reports

Tickets for the celebration to induct the Kentucky High School Basketball Hall of Fame Class of 2015 are now on sale, according to a news release.

The event is scheduled for Saturday, July 11 at 5:30 p.m. at the State Theatre in Elizabethtown.

Anderson County High School graduate Jimmy Dan Conner, Kentucky's Mr. Basketball in 1971, is a member of the class to be inducted. Conner led the Bearcats to their first state tournament appearance and a state runner-up finish. Conner was also named a high school All-American and later captained the University of Kentucky Wildcats' national runner-up team in 1975. He played one year of professional basketball with the Kentucky Colonels of the ABA.

Another inductee, Earle Jones, has strong Anderson County ties. While Jones is best remembered for his accomplishments as head coach at Maysville High School from 1931-1955, he coached Kavanaugh High to the state runner-up finish in 1930.

The celebration will induct 16 members to the Hall of Fame. A Kentucky Hall of Fame Museum is scheduled to begin construction in late June.

The Induction Celebration reception begins at 5:30 in the State Theatre Gallery. Inductees and their families will be available for autographs and meeting the public.

The Pre-Show and Celebration will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $30 each and can be purchased at www.khsbhf.com or in person at the Pritchard Community Center or State Theater in Elizabethtown.

motivational gatherings.

"All of my stuff is faith-based," he said. "I enjoy the church service more than any of (the speaking venues.)"

He also talked about his father, who lost his job after allegations surfaced that the Seminoles had used an ineligible player in 2006 and 2007. "He had a field named for him and a statue in front of the stadium and still got fired," Tommy Bowden said as we talked.

But those dark times gave Bowden even more experience in the faith he shares. "We have got the most comprehensive safety net for people out there," he said as we talked.

It was a fraction of the message Bowden had delivered just a few minutes before.

"Football was a huge, huge part of my life, but not the most important part," Bowden said early in his message, a few moments after telling some jokes, including one about Hope member Freddie Maggard, Bowden's quarterback in his one year in Lexington.

Bowden did not talk a great deal about himself other than some self-deprecating humor - "When I get home, I am the football coach and my wife is the athletic director. When you are coaching, you have one boss and that's the AD," he laughed. Instead, he focused on the timeliness of the message he shared, owing many of the nation's troubles to pushing the Bible out of everyday life.

"As Christians, we have to have a little backbone and defend the Word of God," he said during the service.

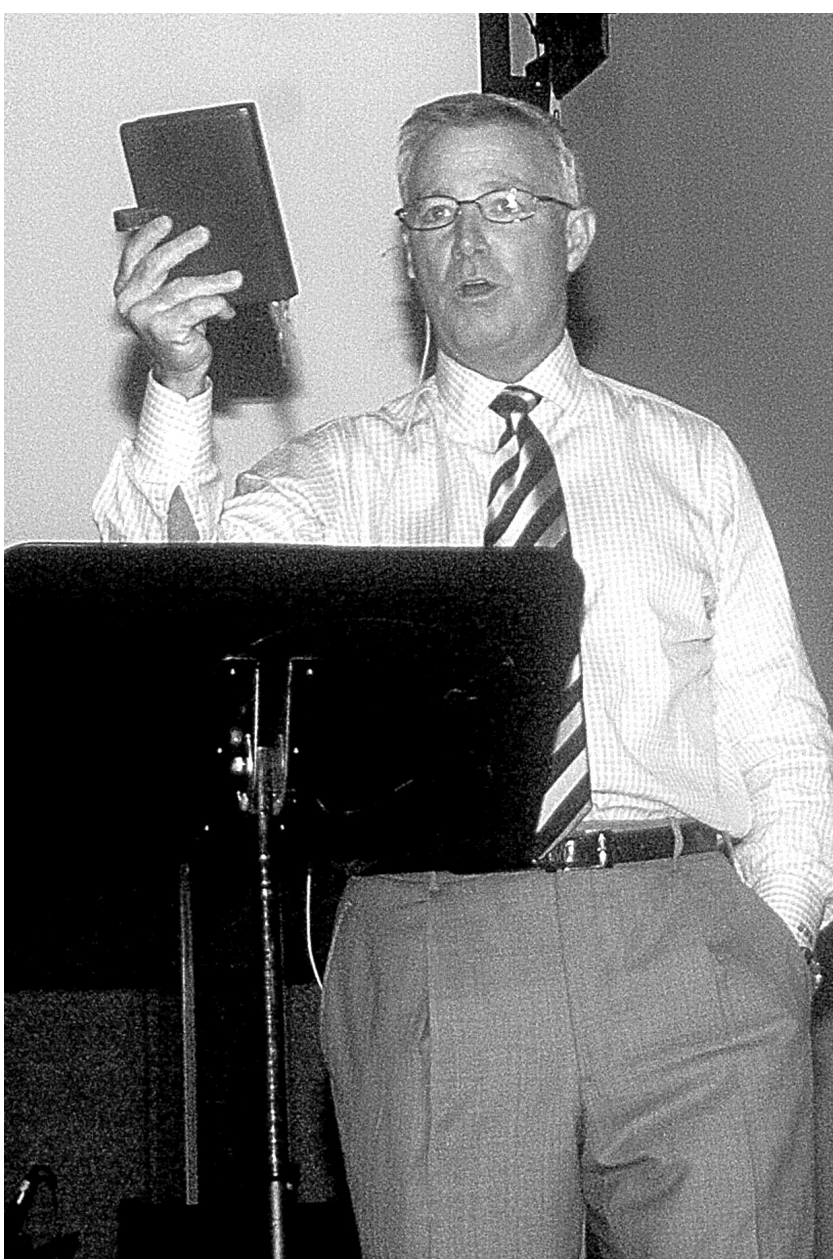

"I want to hear pastor teach the Word of God, not water it down."

He elaborated a few minutes later.

"I believe in a literal interpretation of the Bible," he said. "I am not perfect, but that is what I believe. One of the problems is we have compromised the Word and watered it down."

"God wants us to have all of it, or none of it."

Maggard, in introducing Bowden, said his former coach lived that way. He recalled a time when Bowden led several of the Wildcats in prayer. Not a mundane prayer where the right cliches had been uttered but a real talk with the one Bowden worships.

Tommy Bowden says his life is guided by a literal interpretation of the Bible.

"I saw a man of God," Maggard said.

Even though they had not seen each other for 25 years, Bowden's influence was unmistakable.

"You can have a lot of influence," Bowden said. "It is all in your comfort zone."

It was obvious Sunday that talking about his faith is in Bowden's comfort zone. It flowed as naturally as talking about Bobby Petrino's offense or Jimbo Fisher's defense.

"I am not a Bible scholar," Bowden told his audience. Maybe not. There might not be a Master of Divinity by his name, but his message was an enthusiastic and passionate defense of the Bible and a challenge to make it work in ones life.

It was fitting that toward the end of Bowden's message, he sounded like, well, a coach. Talking about Christianity's influence, Bowden noted that each person in attendance had a part in making a difference. He referred back to the earliest followers of Christ.

"The 12 disciples were as ordinary as you can get, but they turned the world upside down," Bowden said.

He left little doubt he believes the same principle applies to ordinary people today.

Eye protection important for outdoor sports

Best sunglasses improve visibility, can have health benefits

By Kevin Kelly
Ky. Dept. of Fish & Wildlife Resources

Every angler has at one time or another forgotten something in their rush to leave for a fishing trip.

It's disheartening when that something is sunglasses. Squinting and shielding your eyes for hours takes some of the fun out of the experience.

"More than just the damage or discomfort from the bright light, you start getting eye strain because you're squinting to make your pupil even smaller because your pupil doesn't get small enough naturally," said Dr. Seema Capoor, an associate professor of Ophthalmology at the University of Kentucky. "The squinting causes brow ache and tension headaches. It's much more comfortable and safer with sunglasses."

However, not all sunglasses are created equal. The best cut glare and make it easier to see into the water but also block the sun's harmful rays.

Amid a sea of brands and styles and lens types and colors at a wide range of prices, it's easy to become overwhelmed by the choices, so stick to some basic criteria when selecting a pair.

"For something like fishing where you've got a lot of reflection off the surface of the water and you're out in direct sunlight my recommendation would be to go with more of the wraparound style of sunglasses," Capoor said. "Get the good UV filter in the lenses and polarization. The anti-reflective coating or mirror coating on the outside surface is also very helpful."

Look for sunglasses that block 99 to 100 percent of ultraviolet rays.

Ultraviolet radiation can affect different layers of the eye and continued exposure without protection may lead to permanent eye damage. Regular use of sunglasses can slow down cataract formation and lessen the risks of macular degeneration. They can also retard the development of pterygium, an eye condition distinguished by a wing-like growth on the cornea that can interfere with vision and affect anyone who spends a lot of time outdoors, Capoor said.

"We know it's associated with exposure to ultraviolet light," she said. "Fishermen get it a lot. Farmers get it. And closer to the equator where people are at higher altitudes, they get it. It can start out young and then the continued exposure without protection can make it progress and get worse. It can require surgical intervention."

Children and people with light-colored eyes should be particularly mindful about wearing sunglasses.

"Times have changed and there's more penetration of ultraviolet light from the atmosphere than there was 30 years ago," Capoor said. "It is advisable for children, especially blue-eyed or light-eyed children, to be wearing protective sunglasses now."

Composite lenses made from impact-resistant polycarbonate material are lighter than glass and ideal for anglers.

Polycarbonate also is the preferred lens material for shooting glasses. Protective eye wear is required at all shooting ranges on Wildlife Management Areas in Kentucky.

"Things can happen when you're shooting guns," said Mark Marraccini, spokesman for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and an experienced trap shooter. "A lot of your automatics, whenever the shell is ejected and it comes flying back, little hot flecks of burning powder may come out with it."

"They'll get in the corner of your eye and they're painful. Plus, a lot of times, other people on ranges are shooting and there's the off chance that you can get ricochets and deflections or pieces of shot. On pistol ranges, bullets shatter when they hit steel silhouettes and you can get sprayed that way."

"It's important to remember that there's a real serious explosion at really high pressure that's happening about three inches in front of your face. When you put it that way, shooting glasses are extremely important."

On the water, polarized lenses are highly recommended for anglers because they sharpen vision by reducing glare from the sun's reflection.

Darker lenses don't necessarily block more UV rays although they may be preferred by people who are extremely sensitive to light. The environmental conditions can dictate the right lens color.

Gray, brown and green tints are best at providing maximum contrast while maintaining clarity and offering the most sun protection, Capoor said.

Most anglers prefer grey, green or amber colored lenses.

Gray is a good all-purpose lens tint that cuts down on extremely bright conditions and won't distort colors. Green also limits color distortion, reduces glare and improves contrast in bright sun. Brown and amber are versatile tints that cut glare and filter out blue light, increasing contrast and sharpness, especially on cloudy days.

Yellow reduces glare and enhances depth perception and contrast in low light or hazy conditions. It is considered a better option for shooters than anglers.

"Different lens colors will help different colored targets stand out better," Marraccini said. "In different lighting conditions, they make the targets even more visible than if you weren't wearing any glasses at all."

We're taught to apply sunscreen liberally and often to protect our skin from overexposure to the sun. Sunglasses and shooting glasses are just as important. Summer is a great time to shop around for the right pair and to remember not to leave them at home. Your eyes will thank you.

New web section for anglers launched

From staff reports

Fisheries crews with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources routinely see a variety of trophy smallmouth bass, muskellunge, catfish and walleye while doing their sampling studies.

Now the department is unveiling those stream secrets through a new information section on the department's website, according to a news release.

"Stream fishing is a whole lot better than people think it is," said Fisheries Biologist David Baker, who headed the effort. "You can catch the fish of a lifetime in a stream."

Paddlers and anglers can go online to fw.ky.gov to access this section. Use the keywords "stream fisheries" to go directly to this page. The amount of information available makes it easier to plan a trip, the release said.

Currently profiles are limited to just a handful of locations, but more will be added throughout the coming years.

"We're providing a one-stop shop for anglers and paddlers to find out more information about a particular stream," Baker said.

The new section offers stream maps, provides locations of access sites, details mileages between put-in and take-out locations and offers information about stream water levels. For anglers, the section has photos and information about the size and frequency of fish biologists find when they sample stream sections, as well as fishing tips for each area.

"We also include photos of the access sites so visitors will have a visual reference of what they will see," Baker said.

The maps provided on the webpage are smart phone friendly, so users may load them on their phones and hit the stream.

The section currently profiles central Kentucky's famous Elkhorn Creek, three pools of Green River, the Barren River below Barren River Lake and Slate Creek. More sections will be added in the future.

"This webpage is a starting point. We are going to compile more of these streams as we go along in the future," Baker said.

Baker added that now streams have finally returned to normal from the wet spring, the fish are biting. "Smallmouth bass have spawned and are aggressive, rock bass and sunfish are on the beds and channel catfish are near rocky shoals preparing to spawn," he said. "We hope people use this page to help enjoy the wonderful stream fishing opportunities we have in Kentucky."

Department seeks more input on future quail restoration efforts

From staff reports

The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is using an online questionnaire to gather additional public input about the future of quail restoration efforts in the state, according to a news release.

Department biologists, realizing that simply stocking birds was not effective, crafted a 10-year restoration plan which focused efforts on improving habitat in six areas of the state.

Researchers earlier this year issued their five-year benchmark report on efforts to date. They followed up the report with a series of public meetings to listen to ideas from the public about where to take these efforts over the next five years.

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife is now posting an online questionnaire on the future of the plan so that more people can offer their input. The questionnaire is available on the department's website at fw.ky.gov.

Participants should consider reading the benchmark report to better understand the efforts made since the project started in 2010. The report is available online at the department's website.

The questionnaire will remain online for public comment through June 30.

Lady Cats have strong week at camp

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

The Anderson County High School girls' basketball team was impressive during camp at Campbellsville University last week. The Lady Bearcats won five of seven games in the camp, which ran from Monday through Wednesday.

"We defeated Robertson County, Henry County and Mt. Zion from Tennessee," said Anderson coach Clay Birdwhistell. "Our JV team beat Carroll County and Clark County."

Birdwhistell said the Anderson varsity dropped two games, losing to Clark County and Graves County.

"The camp wasn't about wins and losses for us," Birdwhistell said. "Really it was about connecting with the seniors to make sure they understand their roles. It was very important for our team to bond."

Anderson, which made the Eighth Region championship game with a new cast of characters from the team that made consecutive state tournament appearances, lost three starters but returns enough firepower to be considered one of the top teams in the region again in 2016.

"We have a lot of young kids who are going to get opportunities for varsity playing time. They got that at Campbellsville. I couldn't ask for anything better and it was a wonderful, wonderful experience," Birdwhistell said.

Anderson was not at full strength as the Lady Bearcats were missing Taylor Harley and Madeline Wilson, both of whom are expected to play key roles for the team this winter.

"If the regional tournament were held today, our chances would not be very good," Birdwhistell smiled. "The key is it is not going to be played today."

HOOPS

"All of our four returning starters have had real good summers," Hyatt said. "Each of them have had a moment when they took over a game. We played Woodford county and Harper had a big game. We played Scott county and Cobe had a big game. We played Franklin County, Gillis had a big game. We played Eminence, J.P. had a big game."

Hyatt said several other players expected to play big roles for the Bearcats did well over the summer, too.

Anderson loses stellar sharp shooter Austin Cummins, the state's second leading scorer last year, but with an abundance of quality returnees, the Bearcats are seen as one of the contenders to win the Eighth Region next winter.

A: Make sure one is a matchstick.

Old Faithful

Have you ever been to Yellowstone National Park? If so, you may have seen Old Faithful. It is a cone-shaped geyser that erupts about every 91 minutes, shooting 3,700 to 8,400 gallons of boiling water into the air.

A group of explorers discovered Old Faithful in 1870. They were surprised to see it, and after watching it for a while, they named it Old Faithful because of its regular eruptions.

Today, Old Faithful continues to delight park visitors. It is not the biggest or the most consistent geyser, but it is a sight to behold nonetheless.

HOROSCOPES

CAPRICORN
December 22–
January 19

Oh my, Capricorn. It's going to be a confusing time for sure. Do your best to muddle through. Clarity will come by the weekend. A family matter is resolved.

ARIES
March 21–
April 19

Amazing work, Aries. You really put your heart and soul into it, and someone important will take note. Waters at home become calmer.

CANCER
June 22–
July 22

Cool Cancer. You might be shaking on the inside, but no one would ever know it. Keep up the calm exterior. It will get you places this week.

LIBRA
September 23
October 22

No, no, no, Libra. You set a date and made plans. Don't change them to accommodate the wishes of others. It's their turn to accommodate you.

AQUARIUS
January 20–
February 18

Think before you act, Aquarius. There is more to the situation than you realize. An impulse buy lifts spirits at home and gets people busy.

TAURUS
April 20–
May 20

Relax a little, Taurus. An obstacle appears more daunting than it is. A shopping trip uncovers the deal of a lifetime. Seize it. It won't come again.

LEO
July 23–
August 22

La-di-da, Leo. Just because a colleague finds it necessary to toot their own horn doesn't mean you should. Let your work speak for itself.

SCORPIO
October 23–
November 21

Aim high, Scorpio. The tide has turned. A momentous occasion calls for momentous plans. Look to a senior to help. A book arrives with a letter in tow.

February 19–
March 20

Pretty as a picture, Pisces. Life will be rosy this week. Enjoy it while you can. A friend feels let down. Be there for them. Flowers perk up a space.

May 21–
June 21

Goodness gracious, Gemini. You manage to do the impossible yet again. This time, however, you will be rewarded for your efforts. A charity run is worthwhile.

VIRGO
August 23–
September 22

Veer to the left, Virgo. Veer to the right. There will be loads of obstacles to dodge this week. Be cautious, and all will go well. One person's loss is another's gain.

SAGITTARIUS
November 22-
December 21

Savvy Sagittarius. You know how to manage money. A friend, on the other hand, could use some help. Guide them with a firm but loving hand.
